

A Concert with Manzoli at Lady Clive's (13 Mar 1765)

Dexter Edge

National Library of Wales (Aberystwyth), Robert Clive Papers, GB 0210 ROBCLI, File R3/2

Berkeley Square 12 March 1765 8 in the Morning Lady Clive to Lord Clive rec[eived] [by Lord Clive] Nov 1765

.../ Tomorrow I shall have a great deal of Company indeed all the people of quality etc I am on an intimate footing with, or that like me and music, to hear Manzoli sing here, accompanied by Mr Burton on the harpsichord, on which the little Mozarts, the boy aged 8 the girl 12 will also play most completely well and this together with two good Fidlers and a Bass will be all the concert I shall have, & which I hope will be a good return for all the routs I have been invited to. At Manzoli's benefit I gave him a bank bill of 30l and took some tickets but did not go to the benefit being afraid of seeing another riot. This man's singing is beyond any thing I have ever heard; the compass of his voice is not so great as some others, but his taste and manner exceed every thing. [...]

[transcription from Woodfield 1995, 195]

Commentary

The Mozart family arrived in London on 23 Apr 1764 and departed on 24 Jul 1765, a period of 15 months, by far their longest stay anywhere on their European tour. During that time the Mozart children made three appearances at court (27 Apr, 19 May, and 25 Oct 1764) and gave three public concerts (5 Jun 1764 in the Great Room at Spring Garden, 21 Feb 1765 in the Little Theatre in Haymarket, and 13 May 1765 in Hickford's Great Room). Wolfgang also performed a concerto on the organ at a charity concert at Ranelagh House on 29 Jun 1764. In July, shortly before their departure, the Mozart children appeared daily for one week in the Great Room at the Swan and Hoop Tavern. We can be reasonably certain that this is a complete accounting of their public appearances and their appearances at court.

On the other hand, the Mozarts' performances at private concerts and functions in London are much less well documented. In the extract above, Margaret Maskelyne, Lady Clive, writes to her husband Robert in India that she is giving a concert the following day, Wed, 13 Mar 1765, at their house on Berkeley Square in London. Participating in the concert, she writes, will be the celebrated castrato Giovanni Manzoli (accompanied by John Burton on the harpsichord) and the Mozart children. This passage in Lady Clive's letter was discovered by Ian Woodfield, who published an article about it in Music & Letters in 1995.

Margaret Clive, née Maskelyne (1735–1817) was the sister of Nevil Maskelyne (1732–1811), a clergyman and noted astronomer, who was appointed Astronomer Royal on 26 Feb 1765, just a little over two weeks before Lady Clive's concert. Margaret's husband was Robert Clive, the famous (or infamous) "Clive of India" (1725–1774), who was instrumental in the consolidation of British power on the Indian subcontinent, becoming wealthy in the process; he was made Baron Clive in 1762. At the beginning of June the previous year, Clive had departed for his third extended excursion to India; the original plan had been that Lady Clive would accompany him, but in the event she did not, apparently because she was pregnant (Templeton 2016, 63).

Nathaniel Dance-Holland, Portrait of Lady Clive
(Powis Castle)

The position of Lady Clive's name in Leopold Mozart's travel notes suggests that they met her around the time of the concert (Briefe, i:194; Schurig 1920, 36). Her concert on 13 Mar 1764 took place at her home in Berkeley Square (no. 45), probably in the Great Drawing Room (Woodfield 1995, 196). Robert Clive died in this house in 1774; it is variously said that he committed suicide or died from the effects of opium taken to alleviate the pain of gallstones.

Edge, “A Concert with Manzoli at Lady Clive’s (13 Mar 1765).”

45 Berkeley Square, London
(Wikimedia Commons)

The plaque commemorating “Clive of India” can be seen in close-up here.

45 Berkeley Square, Great (Front) Drawing Room
(Country Life, 1937)

We do not know the program of Lady Clive's concert, but Woodfield (1995, 202) speculates that Wolfgang might have performed items from his Six Sonatas for Harpsichord, Violin, and Cello, op. 3 (K. 10–15). The dedication of that set to Queen Charlotte is dated 18 Jan 1765 (Dokumente, 39–40), and the sonatas were first advertised on 20 Mar 1765, just one week after Lady Clive's concert (Dokumente, 43). As Woodfield points out, the British Library preserves a copy of the first edition of op. 3 that formerly belonged to the Clives (Hirsch IV.3a). He goes on to speculate that Wolfgang and Nannerl might also have performed the four-hand sonata, K. 19d (the authenticity of which remains uncertain), or a concerto for two keyboards by Wagenseil (Woodfield 1995, 203).

On 11 Mar 1765, the day before Lady Clive's letter to her husband, an advertisement had appeared in The Public Advertiser announcing the Mozarts' intention to give a final public concert "before their Departure from England" (Dokumente, 43); this concert eventually took place on 13 May 1765. In her letter, Lady Clive gives the ages of the children as 8 and 12, matching the ages given in the advertisement; but Wolfgang and Nannerl were in fact 9 and 13 at the time (for more on the advertised ages of the Mozart children, see our entries for 21 Jan 1765 and 10 May 1765).

B Y D E S I R E.

For the Benefit of Master MOZART, of eight Years, and Miss MOZART, of twelve Years of Age, prodigies of Nature, before their Departure from England, which will be in six Weeks Time.

THERE will be performed at the End of this Month, or the Beginning of April next, a Concert of Vocal and Instrumental MUSIC.

Tickets at Half a Guinea each.

To be had of Mr. Mozart, at Mr. Williamson's in Thrift-street, Soho; where those Ladies and Gentlemen, who will honour him with their Company from Twelve to Three in the Afternoon, any Day in the Week, except Tuesday and Friday, may, by taking each a Ticket, gratify their Curiosity, and not only hear this young Music Master and his Sister perform in private; but likewise try his surprising Musical Capacity, by giving him any Thing to play at Sight, or any Music without Bass, which he will write upon the Spot, without recurring to his Harpsichord.

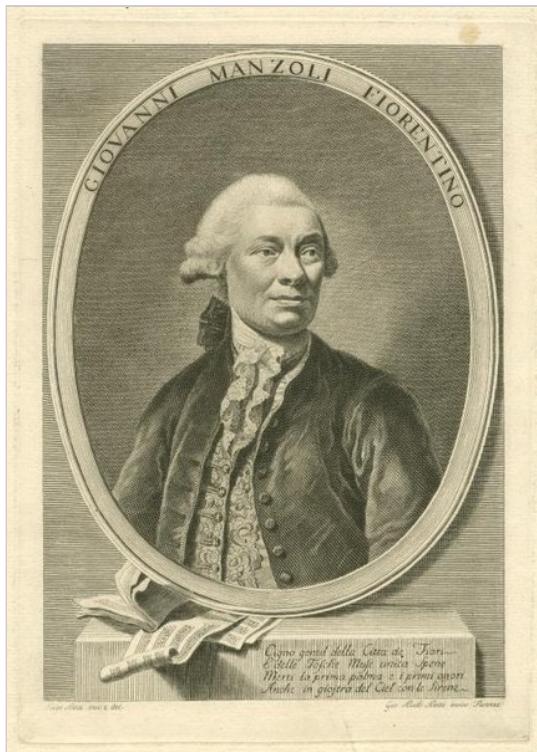

The Day and Place of the Concert will be advertised in the Public Advertiser eight Days before.

Advertisement of a planned concert by the Mozart children

The Public Advertiser (London), Mon, 11 Mar 1765

(newspapers.com)

Lady Clive's concert also featured the castrato Giovanni Manzoli (also often "Manzuoli", c. 1720–1782; on Manzoli see also Hansell 2001 and Rice 2004). Manzoli had been engaged by the King's Theater in London for the season 1764/65, making his debut to tremendous acclaim on 24 Nov 1764 in the pasticcio Ezio. Leopold Mozart first mentions Manzoli in a letter to Lorenz Hagenauer on 8 Feb 1765 (Briefe, i:178–79), writing somewhat enviously of the great sums the singer was earning in London. Manzoli's name also appears in Leopold's travel notes (Briefe, i:194; Schurig 1920, 35).

Giovanni Manzoli

Baron Grimm, in an article in Correspondance littéraire dated 15 Jul 1766, mentions how greatly Wolfgang had benefited from hearing Manzoli sing during the winter of 1764/65:

Ayant entendu Manzuoli à Londres pendant tout un hiver, il en a si bien profité que, quoiqu'il ait la voix excessivement faible, il chante avec autant de goût que d'âme. [Theroux 1879, 82; Dokumente, 55]

Having heard Manzoli in London through an entire winter, he has benefited so much that even though he has an extremely weak voice, he sings with equally as much taste and feeling.

Daines Barrington, as part of his examination of young Wolfgang in June 1765, famously asked the boy to improvise arias of love and rage in the manner of Manzoli (Barrington 1771, 60–61; Dokumente, 89).

Lady Clive refers to "Manzoli's benefit." On Thu, 7 Mar 1765, just five days before the date of her letter, Manzoli had given a performance for his own benefit of Giardini's Il re pastore, composed especially for the occasion.

Advertisement for Manzoli's benefit performance of Giardini's Il re pastore
The Public Advertiser (London), Thu, 7 Mar 1765
(newspapers.com)

Following his season in London, Manzoli retired from the stage and took a position as chamber singer at the court of Grand Duke Leopold in Florence (on this portion of the singer's career, see Rice 2014). He came out of retirement in 1771 to sing in the productions of Hasse's Ruggiero and Mozart's Ascanio in Alba, both commissioned for the wedding in Milan of Archduke Ferdinand and Princess Maria Beatrice of Modena in the fall of 1771 (see Tagliavini 1956, vii and passim, and Rice 2004).

Also mentioned in Lady Clive's letter is the harpsichordist and composer John Burton (1730–1782), whose name likewise appears in Leopold's travel notes ("Mr: Borton Clavierist"; Briefe, i: 196 and Schurig 1920, 38). Woodfield (1995, 195) speculates that one of the "Fidlers" mentioned in her letter may have been Tommaso Mazzinghi, whose name appears in Leopold's travel notes immediately before Lady Clive's.

Notes (↑)

On the identification of the "Front Drawing Room" as the "Great Drawing Room" at 45 Berkeley Square in London, see Fairclough (2000, 102).

We are grateful to Catherine Sprague for her assistance with the images in this entry, for bringing the Fairclough article to our attention, and for helpful comments on an earlier draft.

Bibliography (↑)

Barrington, Daines. 1771. "Account of a Very Remarkable Young Musician." Philosophical Transactions, vol. 60, 54–64.

Cowgill, Rachel Elizabeth. 2000. "Mozart's Music in London, 1764–1829: Aspects of Reception and Canonicity." Ph. D. diss., King's College London.

Fairclough, Oliver. 2000. "In the richest and most elegant manner": A suite of furniture for Clive of India." Furniture History, 36 (2000): 102–14.

Hansell, Kathleen Kuzmick. 2001. "Manzuoli, Giovanni." Grove Music Online. Most recently accessed 28 Jan 2019.

Rice, John A. 2004. "A dispute involving the musico Giovanni Manzoli and Mozart's Ascanio in Alba." Fonti musicali italiane, vol. 9 (2004): 7–19. [academia.edu]

———. 2014. "Grand Duke Pietro Leopoldo's Musical Patronage in Florence, 1765–1790, as Reflected in the Ricasoli Collection." Webpage. Most recently accessed 14 Mar 2022.

Schurig, Arthur. 1920. Leopold Mozart Reise-Aufzeichnungen 1763–1771. 27 faksimilierte Blätter. Dresden: Oscar Laube. [Hathi]

Sprague, Catherine. [forthcoming]. Mozart, the Salzburg Years, 1756-1781: Images and Insights. Hillsdale, N. Y.: Pendragon.

Tagliavini, Luigi Ferdinando. 1956. Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. Ascanio in Alba (NMA ii/5/5). Kassel: Bärenreiter.

Templeton, Hannah Margaret. 2016. "The Mozarts in London: Exploring the Family's Professional, Social and Intellectual Networks in 1764–1765." Ph. D. diss., King's College London.

Tourneux, Maurice. 1879. Correspondance littéraire, philosophique et critique par Grimm, Diderot, Raynal, Meister, etc., revue sur les textes originaux. Vol. 7. Paris: Garnier Frères.

Woodfield, Ian. 1995. "New Light on the Mozarts' London Visit: A Private Concert with Manzuoli." Music & Letters 76/2 (May 1995): 187–208.

Credit: Ian Woodfield

Author: Dexter Edge

Link(s): NA

Search Term: NA

Source Library: National Library of Wales (Aberystwyth), Robert Clive Papers

Categories: Biography, Reception

First Published: Mon, 25 Feb 2019

Citation:

Edge, Dexter. 2019. "A Concert with Manzoli at Lady Clive's (13 Mar 1765)." In: Mozart: New Documents, edited by Dexter Edge and David Black. First published 25 Feb 2019. [direct link]